THE AMAZING MENTAL PENDULUM

In the past 30-40 years there have been no new major innovations in the use of the Pendulum.....the following may well represent a breakthrough.....

How it all began....

It started in a very unusual way.

Ever since I was a child I had been aware of the peculiar abilities of the pendulum. My Dad used to use one. Which was very strange because Dad would never believe that Man could land on the Moon. Until it happened! In fact he had trouble accepting any form of new technology at all. But he believed in the power of the pendulum and the extraordinary power of hypnosis.

I can recall on many occasions that neighbors would bring over eggs for Dad to "sex". (That means to find out whether they were fertile or not).

Dad used to take off his gold wedding ring and tie a piece of cotton to it. He would then let it hang from about 6 inches of cotton over the egg (which didn't seem to mind).

If the ring started to swing it one direction, it was fertilized. If it swung in the other it was not. And the accuracy must have been pretty good because the neighbors kept returning year after year.

This "weight on a piece of thread" is called a PENDULUM.

It wasn't until recently that I learned that most major Japanese chicken hatcheries use a pendulum operator to determine the status of each egg. Apparently it saves them millions of dollars a year. And as the average Japanese businessman is very profit orientated I cannot imagine them using a "mystical" technology like this.....unless it worked.

So..... how does it work?

And the answer is...I don't really know. And neither does anyone else! All that is known is that it is controlled by the subconscious mind. The idea being that you hold this "weight on a piece of string" between your thumb and forefinger and wait until all movement stops. You then ask, either mentally or out loud, a straightforward question that requires a YES or NO answer. The pendulum will start to circle and the direction of this circle gives you the answer. Once you establish whether clockwise or anti-clockwise is your "Yes" you have a useful device which taps directly into your subconscious. This simple little device has been around for thousands of years but it is only recently that Quantum Physics is starting to suspect how it may work.

It does not matter too much what the actual pendulum is constructed of. I use a paperclip on a piece of cotton. As this is very light it has little inertia and tends to pick up rotational speed quite rapidly. A heavier pendulum takes a lot longer to accelerate and if you inadvertently let it go while it is in full swing it could "wipe out" anybody watching. There is a volume of material written about actual pendulum construction and some of it is quite elaborate, but as far as I can tell, ANY small weight on a thread will give basic answers. After all, it is basically only the subconscious mind converting knowledge into a discernible mechanical movement. Whether it works or not depends on the ability of your subconscious to "trigger" off an involuntary muscle movement. And the strange thing is almost everyone who tries it achieves positive results. Even some of the world's greatest skeptics have been astounded to find that it actually works for them!

Anyway....on with the story.....

As a boy I never paid much attention to this pendulum business. I was too busy with other things, like trying to figure out what girls were all about!

However during my high school years my English teacher re-introduced me to the pendulum. He was an expert at it and as I showed a keen interest he taught me how to find lost or hidden objects with this weight on a bit of string. He used some sort of fairly heavy crystal on a piece of thin thread. I've forgotten what it was, but he seemed to feel that the type of crystal was important.

I had considerable success with this and used to impress my classmates no end by finding objects that they had hidden. What would happen is that I would leave the room while an object was hidden.

After I had returned I would pick up a similar object - made of the same metal - and hold this in the palm of my pendulum hand as a sort of "sample". I would then instruct the pendulum to swing and point in the direction of the "lost" object. I would do this from two different angles so that I could triangulate the position of the object. I don't recall ever failing to find it! The whole business intrigued my classmates no end. However there was one engineering teacher there who told me that the whole thing was a load of garbage and I'd be better off focusing on my school work.

As I grew older I realized that the world was full of these "flat earth" society members. He was actually a very good teacher but like a lot of these career people suffered from tunnel vision.

Anyway I soon became bored with this whole pendulum business and forgot all about it until a couple of years ago when I picked up a woman's magazine with a picture of a pendulum on the cover and a very constructive article inside. I had actually parked my car in a no-parking spot outside a newsagency and rushed inside to buy a newspaper.

As I exited something dragged me back in and I walked around the back to a magazine stand. This particular stand was right at the rear of the shop and I would not normally have looked this far back, but I did. My eyes fell on this particular woman's magazine and within 30 seconds of entering I was back at the counter buying it. I pulled the car along to a parking spot and sat there to read the article. There was definitely something about this pendulum business that "grabbed" me!

So I started fiddling with it again. Which is very strange because one would hardly expect the editor of an international business-ideas newsletter to get himself involved in such a "fringe" activity.

But for various reasons which become obvious later it would appear that I am being "led by the hand" down a certain path which I find quite astounding.

The conventional pendulum has major limitations. To use it properly you have to be sitting upright, or close to it.

And there is always a substantial time delay between asking a question and getting an answer. The pendulum has to start swinging and it may take 30 seconds or so before a definite Yes/No answer emerges. During which you have probably started thinking about something else and thereby confuse the pendulum.

I figured there had to be a better way!

I started to wonder if I could get a Yes/No answer directly from my subconscious without the mechanical assistant.

And this is what I meant when I said right at the start of this report that it started in a very strange way.

The chain-of-events that led up to the present state of knowledge are quite un-real!

Once I had the technique going reliably and found I could even use it while I was driving the car.

Then I discovered by accident that I could get a rapid "Yes/No" response and also a "No/Yes". And I started to realize how incredibly useful this could be. This type of response means that there is both a Yes and a No answer.

A mechanical pendulum cannot give a response like this as it would have to circle both ways simultaneously. It would probably end up so delirious with joy that it would smack you in the eye in an expression of unbridled appreciation.

Any conventional pendulum operator reading this will probably be jumping up and down with excitement at this point!

If so, I've got even better news!!

More recently I've been able to get a "slow" yes which I have taken to mean as a "Yes...BUT." Likewise with "No". Sort of an uncertain Yes or No response.

And the most amazing thing about all this is the manner in which it can be used.

The most useful aspect is while I am in bed at night and I am using alpha to solve business problems. I come up with some alpha answers then "ask" the pendulum if one specific answer is correct. I ask for a straight Yes/No answer. Sometimes I am totally staggered to find that this "Mental Pendulum" response tells me none of the answers are right, even though at least one answer felt like the right one. So I keep coming up with ideas and use the pendulum to get a sense of mental direction. I have slowly evolved a "protocol" which involves asking a specific train of questions which tends to put me on the right track. This is far quicker than "guessing" questions to ask. I have been able to come up with the most extraordinary results in this way .....which have converted to cold, hard dollars and cents! Some of the ideas are not what I would have expected at all, but in retrospect they have been absolutely correct.

This procedure has gone a long way to convince me that the subconscious mind has all the answers necessary for a person to achieve total success and freedom in life! The problem has always been .....how to tap the subconscious for answers. It is starting to look like this might be one workable method.

But better still, I have used techniques to program up specific dreams and used the pendulum to help interpret them.....THERE AND THEN!

Basically what happens is that I program to have a specific dream and at the same time program to wake up immediately after it. (The subconscious can easily be programmed to do this - it will do anything you tell it..... once you have learnt the procedure). I then analyze the dream using the Mental Pendulum. This way I seem to be able to get some reasonably accurate interpretations which have proven to be remarkably handy.

Which brings me to one of the more helpful aspects of this Mental Pendulum.

It has proven to be fairly handy in the casinos because casino management give you a funny look if you start using a conventional pendulum around the roulette wheel or slot machines. With this Mental Pendulum nobody knows what you're doing. You can stand around with your hands in your pockets asking for Yes/ No answers. I find the whole thing very uncanny, particularly in the way I discovered it, but I doubt whether it is an original discovery as there are "dowsers" (people who use divining rods) who work in a similar manner. This is called "deviceless" dowsing. But at least it is original with regard to the method being used to interpret dreams and solve business problems. Or win on the slot machines and Roulette! All you need on Roulette is a 5% advantage over the "house" to make money. With the Slots you only need to know which machine is likely to pay out. I normally use the Mental Pendulum after I have given the machine a couple of spins. For some reason I can get a more accurate answer this way.

The usual mechanical pendulum gives a Yes/No/Maybe response, plus a couple of others if you're really proficient. This Mental Pendulum so far has produced 8 different styles of response ..... all very rapid and definite.

I have trained a couple of friends to use this new method - it took several days in one case and 2 weeks in another. But I have been able to simplify all this and have finalized a training method whereby virtually anybody could get it "up and running" within a week or so without any undue effort. (Some people will probably be able to "trigger" it off on the first try).

This whole Mental Pendulum procedure has improved my business and personal life out of sight. And the strange thing about it all is this: I have the feeling it is a "half-way" method to be able to bring on the 6th sense of INTUITION at will.

The reason I say this is because more and more frequently lately I am getting a "full on" mental impression before I even ask the Mental Pendulum for an answer.

That is .....I DO NOT EVEN HAVE TO ASK THE QUESTION - I JUST "KNOW" THE CORRECT ANSWER.

All I have to do is THINK about asking the question!

On the occasions when this happens I feel quite elated. It has become obvious that the whole procedure is leading somewhere.

The trick now is to teach other people to do it. If the procedure eventually brings on the 6th sense as a fully controllable, working human facility then this "discovery" will take on a rather important new dimension.

There is a lot of research to do as the whole thing is "leading-edge". It seems to me that the whole process could be the start of something quite useful to the human race, particularly in view of the fact that a lot of my thinking and energy is being directed to experiment further by some force I don't understand. I'm being "drip-fed" information from somewhere!!!

If you're a bit vague about what a pendulum is, buy a book about the subject. But please be aware that there is a lot of rubbish written about pendulums. Pick a book that looks easy to read and was written recently. There is actually a pendulum kit out on the market which contains a manual and a brass pendulum. I found it excellent and it should be available through your local bookshop. I think it cost me around $40 but it is beautifully presented and is right up to date.

This whole business of "Pendulum Power" is so far removed from my everyday activity of producing a serious business-orientated lateral thinking newsletter that I sometimes wonder if I'm wasting valuable research time. However there seems to be a "compulsion" to carry on and it has become crystal clear that I am being "guided" down a certain path. Some of the concepts I have been able to generate have converted into substantial lumps of cash.....solely due to using this Mental Pendulum technique. And that to me.....business-wise.....is the bottom line!

IT REALLY COMES DOWN TO A PORTABLE, FLEXIBLE METHOD OF RAPIDLY TAPPING THE SUBCONSCIOUS, WITHOUT MECHANICAL ASSISTANCE AND WITHOUT AWKWARD SETTING-UP PROCEDURES.
